Ib Kimose, Business Unit Director, Autorola Solutions, says, “Risk management and cost saving are central issues in vehicle fleet management and every fleet manager wants to achieve large returns with low costs.

Each day an asset is standing still on the compound without moving onwards in the flow, it depreciates, while at the same time accruing cost to storage. Delays impact largely on fleet management businesses and is directly linked to the final sales price and margin obtained. This has a direct impact on cashflow.”

He continues, “Working intelligently with data allows you to monitor on any gateway in your flow and allows you to freely configure your focus areas; from timely call back of your cars on the road, to actual returns, return inspections, sales preparations to online listing of cars and the aftersales processes.”

Autorola Solutions’ insight highlights that fleet managers agree that they spend too much time reporting work times and the most frustrating aspect of fleet management is the high cost throughout the lifecycle of the asset and long lead-times.

“It is vital to stay connected to your stakeholder landscape; customers and drivers, as well as suppliers and business partners, all play an important role in the different stages of the asset life cycle,” Ib explains.

“Now how do I equip my business to accommodate these needs if I want to be a significant player in this market?” will be the question on most fleet owners’ agenda. The answer is simple: make it simple.
